

Launch of IDCN in Los Angeles, USA

The IDCN Corporate Members are committed to being Dual Career friendly Companies, to ensure they are attracting and retaining world-class talent, and enable more of our employees to be mobile. The International Dual Career Network (IDCN) launched in February the 1st US location, in Los Angeles, with an event organized and hosted by Nestlé USA, Inc.

"I think we can truly leverage this network to address a very important issue for relocating families not only internationally but within the US", said Norma Cuellar, Manager International HR for Nestlé US.

"I think the Nestlé Los Angeles team has shown real courage in being a fast mover and soon New York will launch and hopefully there will be great plans for many networks across North America in the future" declared Sue Johnson, Nestlé Head of Gender Balance and Diversity.

The event provided the opportunity for IDCN spouses to meet recruiters, HR corporate members and also to network with like-minded spouses facing similar challenges. 47 IDCN members joined the event, along with 29 companies represented by their HR Managers. A great success, shared in a very open mind-set and positive spirit.

Please have a look at the event summary video clicking here or on the image below.

For further information on the IDCN project in Los Angeles please contact Norma Cuellar, Manager International HR for Nestlé US.

For more information about IDCN and the Global Roll-out activities, please contact Marian Chiraches, IDCN Global Coordinator at contact@idcn.info.